

Contents

Editor's Preface	9
Sławomir Cieślowski – biography Hubert Hładaj, Lucyna Lipowska	15
Indology – an archaic dinosaur or a modern field of studies? Iwona Milewska	41
The fundamental problems of contemporary Indology Greg Bailey	47
The fundamental problems of contemporary Indology. Addenda Greg Bailey	63
Strategies for the future of Sanskrit studies John Brockington	75
Seven years on – a further postscript John Brockington	83
Philosophy and philology, East and West, need and basis for a global approach Jan E. M. Houben	87
Postscript: towards a new Indology and new Sanskrit studies Jan E. M. Houben	129
Quo vadis Oriental studies? Maria Krzysztof Byrski	145
Study of South Asia in the American university Patrick Olivelle	167

Whither Sanskrit, whither classical Indology in the Western world? Ashok Aklujkar	171
How to teach Sanskrit? Didactic aspect of the European Sanskrit grammars – a historical survey Iwona Milewska	191
Advice for grammarians Johannes Bronkhorst	217
Dialogue: the way to Indian philosophy Saroja Bhate	231
The sense of ego-maker in classical Sāmkhya and Yoga. Recon- sideration of ahamkara with reference to the mind-body problem Marzenna Jakubczak	235
Some thoughts about Edward Said, Hindutva, and Western Indology Klaus Karttunen	263
Contributors	274